

THE PISTOL DESEDED JOHNSON.

Fought Two Men Who Spoke
Roughly to a Woman
in His Place.

ONE OF THEM AN OFFICER.

He Was Accompanied by a One-
Armed Man, Who Flourished a Revolver.

TWO ARRESTS AFTER THE FIGHT.

Prisoners Tally Exactly with the Description Given by Johnson, but Both Deny Any Part in the Affair.

All that stirred Johnson to action was that she was a woman, weak and defenseless, and that the men who had just entered the place spoke roughly to her. He knew not who she was, nor cared who they were. His hand bled, and he was angry at the men without reckoning that there were two of them, and only one of him. All that he did observe was that the smaller of the two had but one arm; so he grappled with the other. He was fast teaching this man a lesson when he felt something cold pressed against his temple, and, turning quickly, faced a revolver.

"Turn that man loose or I'll shoot!"

It was the one-armed man who spoke, and he looked determined. The woman fled from the place screaming. Johnson unwillingly relinquished his grasp on the other man and arose. The one-armed man and his companion then gave Johnson an unmerciful beating and left the room together.

The scene was enacted in the combination saloon and restaurant at No. 137 Van Brunt street, Brooklyn, about 2 o'clock yesterday morning. A woman had come into that place, and she was being abused and hauled about by two men who were standing near her. Johnson, who was sitting at a table near the door, saw the woman being treated in this manner, and he sprang to her aid. He was met by the two men, who were both armed with revolvers. Johnson, who was a white man, about 35 years of age, and of medium build, was fighting with the two men, who were both black men, one of whom was a police officer. Johnson was wounded in the head and arm, and the two men were arrested.

According to him she ordered a cup of coffee, sitting it, when the two men entered and took seats at a table near her. They first made an attempt to engage her in conversation, but she ignored them. Finally, jumping from his seat, one of the men cried in indignant tones to the bartender:

"That woman upstairs; I am an officer."

"I don't care if you are," answered Johnson, "you have no right to run that woman out of here."

The two men thereupon sprang at Johnson, he declares. He thrust the one-armed man aside and ran to the door, where the police officer was waiting. Johnson was arrested, and the two men were also arrested.

Both men were placed under arrest on a charge of assault. Baker said that he had not been to the place where the fight was said to have occurred, that he had spent the night with friends miles away. Johnson also denied the charge, saying that he knew nothing of the affair. Captain Callahan, who suspended Baker, and Justice Tighe held the policeman and Mahon for examination tomorrow.

The change will not interfere with the trimmers on board ship, as they cannot be dispensed with by any means yet discovered.

IT WAS A FIGHT FOR LIFE.

Policeman Hawkins's Desperate Encounter
With a Burly Negro in a Coney Island Shanty.

But for his quickness of wit and coolness in a trying moment it is more than likely that Officer Thomas Hawkins, who is attached to the West Brighton police force, would now be a dead man.

Shortly before midnight yesterday the policeman started to search for one John White, a negro cook, who, earlier in the evening, had tried to murder a woman by the name of Lucy Simmons.

Policeman Hawkins located his man in a shanty on the Coney Island meadows, and after repeated knockings on the door and getting no response, he kicked it in. White, who is a big, burly negro, drew his pistol, and pointing it at the policeman's heart pulled the trigger. Luckily the cartridge failed to explode. Once more the frenzied negro tried to shoot the policeman, but again the cartridge failed.

The two men struggled all over the room, the negro using his fists with such effect that the policeman's face was covered with blood to flow. The colored man was rapidly weakening, however, and a well-directed blow from the officer's club laid him out cold on the floor. Summoning assistance, Hawkins got to White's station house on West Eighth street.

At 11 o'clock Monday night White, who is a cook employed at the Brighton Beach race track, attempted to kill Lucy Simmons, a young mulatto woman, in her home, at 110 West Eighth street. It was because the Simmons woman was to be an important witness for the prosecution in the case of White's trial for the murder of the late John White, who was killed in the Coney Island cook yesterday morning, and at the request of his counsel the case was adjourned until Thursday.

LEFT HOME FOR CHINAMEN.

Mrs. Walker Fled to Pell Street and Her Husband Secured a Divorce.

Edward A. Walker, Jr., and Lydia Bertha Lippincott were married in Camden, N. J., March 22, 1890. Ten days after the marriage the bride declares her husband's family tried to make a servant out of her. She left her home and fled to New York. She was taken in by Lizette Kelly, of No. 9 Pell street. Since then, according to her husband, she has lived and consorted with Chinamen.

Justice Gaylor, of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, granted Walker an absolute divorce yesterday. Among the co-respondents named were George A. Kelly, of No. 9 Pell street; Lee See, No. 41 Bayard street; Lem Get, otherwise known as "Farmer," No. 42 Oliver street, and a man known as "Fat," of No. 11 Mott street.

EMBRACED THE PRETTY LADY.

Mrs. Clark Had a Struggle with a Strange Visitor.

SHE FINALLY BROKE AWAY.

Ran Out of the Room, Slammed
the Door and Locked the Man In.

POLICEMAN QUICKLY SUMMONED.

The Man Had Called in Reference to Mrs. Clark's Advertisement Seeking a Position as a Housekeeper.

A widow, dark-haired, blue-eyed, pretty, petite, and only twenty-six, lives on the third floor of the house at No. 302 Fulton street, occupying some of the apartments herself, renting others. She is Mrs. Clara E. Clark.

The renting of rooms has not been profitable recently, so Mrs. Clark concluded to abandon that plan of earning a living. After carefully considering the next step she inserted an advertisement for a place as housekeeper in a newspaper last Sunday morning. It caught the eye of a gentleman of fifty-six or thereabout, who last night told the police of the Fulton Street Station he was Charles F. Spencer, of No. 290 Halsey street. He said also that he was a journalist, but the numerous samples of cloth found in his possession led the police to believe he is a travelling salesman for Andrew McLean & Co., manufacturers, of No. 608 Broome street, New York, their name appearing on his sample book. Further, he declared he was married.

Spencer is a good-looking man whose hair and mustache are white in spots. He looked at Mrs. Clark's door last Sunday afternoon. She was alone at the time, but when he declared he had called to inquire about a housekeeper she admitted him.

The widow, when he had entered the room, noticed, she says, that his face was flushed and his legs unsteady. He looked at her archly, and at last, she declared, embraced her.

This was too much for the young woman, who screamed. The other tenants heard her cry, and rushed upstairs. There, Mrs. Clark says, she was struggling with her visitor, who had clutched her throat in an effort to silence her.

You hold him while I get a policeman," shouted the neighbor, as she scampered down the stairs. Spencer turned to the door, but the little widow slipped past him, twisted the key in the lock and then closed the door.

"You'll stay here until a policeman comes," said she.

Spencer grabbed a flat iron from the table, Mrs. Clark says, and with this he hit her, attacked the door. In a few minutes it was a wreck, every panel gone, and the cross pieces splintered. Finally what was left of the door flew open, and Spencer rushed out.

Policeman Seymour, of the Fulton Street Station, was mounting the stairs, and Spencer ran through a rear room to an extension and climbed out upon the roof. There the policeman captured him. He was taken to the station house and locked up.

DEATH CLAIMED BOTH.

Aged Mrs. Waterman Died on Sunday and
Her Daughter Expired the Next Day from Grief.

There will be a double funeral service to-night at No. 175 Bainbridge street, Brooklyn, over the bodies of mother and daughter, who died within twenty-four hours of each other. They are Mrs. Rebecca Waterman and Annie A. Waterman.

Mrs. Waterman died on Sunday after a lingering illness at the age of eighty-five, while Miss Waterman passed away on Monday. The latter was fifty years old, and the two were almost inseparable.

There was a distracted son who died about the daughter that she was taken ill and died from grief. The bodies now lie side by side in the drawing room above the place, with a distracted son to mourn the loss of mother and sister. The son John is in the drug business in New York, and the three took possession of this comfortable home a year ago, where they all lived most happily.

The daughter's last words were: "I am going to meet mother." The interment will be in Cypress Hills Cemetery to-morrow, and mother and daughter will be laid side by side.

PURROY IN BROOKLYN.

The Baiting Tammany Will Make His
First Efforts Over the River on Thursday Next.

County Clerk Henry D. Purroy, the baiting Tammanyite, will make his first effort to break into Brooklyn next Thursday night. As an initial effort primaries will then be held in the Eighth Ward, and if any interest is taken in the movement all the wards of the city will be organized.

It is understood that Hugh McLaughlin, most recent of New York, has offered to the Tammany bid and will use their influence to repel Purroy's invasion into Brooklyn. Senator Purroy is a question of who will be the other independents are holding back.
